Excerpt: . . . CHAPTER XVI. MATTER FOR ADVANCED STUDY AND REFERENCE. The following matter is to be used for study, reference, or explanation, and connected with the leading work upon the general topics according to the judgment of the teacher. The object in separating these additional definitions, rules, explanations, and material for reference from the topics to which they relate is to gain clearness of outline and direct connection in the presentation of the leading topics, to make compact and convenient the reference matter, and to leave the teacher free to select the material best suited to the class at any stage of progress. Matter related to leading topics should always be adapted to the preparation and needs of the pupils. These vary greatly in different schools and often in succeeding classes in the same school. Any lesson in related work, as Classes of Pronouns, should not be taught until all the truths which underlie the points in it have been presented. The rules for capital letters, marks of punctuation, the list of irregular verbs, the use of auxiliaries, comparison, declension, and conjugation will, of course, all be used in the preparation and criticism of work assigned. It is hoped that an arrangement which has proved very convenient in the experience of the writer may meet the needs of other teachers. Definitions of the Parts of Speech. The Parts of Speech are the classes into which words are divided according to their uses. A Noun is a...
