B-279653 officials in the Space Station Program Office, the Space Shuttle Program Office, the Office of Human Space Flight, the Office of Life and Microgravity Sciences and Applications, the Office of the Comptroller, and the X-38 development program. We also met with officials from NASAs space station Cost Assessment and Validation Task Force to discuss the scope and results of their work, and the National Research Council to discuss ongoing work related to station disposal. To examine potential impacts of satisfying s debris tracking requirement, we discussed a NASA recent Air Force study with cognizant officials and reviewed previous debris tracking studies. NASA We used budget data to depict certain costs and to derive other costs. We used cost reports and independent assessments to test the reliability of s estimates and to identify cost risks to the program. We did not, NASA NASA however, attempt to independently validate s budget data. We performed our work from December 1997 to...
